CONNELLVILLE, PA., THURSDAY EVENING SEPTEMBER 19, 1907

PRICE ONE CENT.

I. C. SMUTZ SUED FOR $50,000 BY MISS MERCEDES GLADDEN.

Daughter of Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Gladden Brings Action for Breach of Promise.

WEDDING SUDDENLY CALLED OFF

By Mr. Smutz After Many of the Guests Had Assembled at Youngstown Last Week and All Preparations Had Been Made—Groom-to-Be Telegraphed He Was Not Coming and That a Letter of Explanation Followed.

A breach of promise suit for $50,000 was filed at Uniontown at 3 o'clock this afternoon by Attorney W. C. McKeen on behalf of Miss Mercedes Gladden of Youngstown, O., against I. C. Smutz of New Haven, Conn. The suit is the result of the abrupt calling off of their wedding by Mr. Smutz on September 10. The tongues of society have been working overtime since that day delving around for a reason for Mr. Smutz's action. On that date Mr. Smutz sent a note to the local newspapers stating that he would not marry Miss Gladden and making the request that no comment be made regarding his announcement in view of the fact that the engagement had previously been announced.

Relatives of both families had left for Youngstown on September 10 when Mr. Smutz changed his mind regarding his marriage to Miss Gladden. The invitations had been sent out and all preparations had been made by Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Gladden, parents of Miss Gladden at their Youngstown home. Miss Gladden had no previous intimation of it and claimed that Mr. Smutz did not intend to fulfill his promise.

In the suit filed today Miss Gladden sets forth in detail her engagement to Mr. Smutz and of the arrangements for their marriage. Her detail her fiancé arranged. Mr. Smutz had never intimated to her she claims that he might change his mind at the last minute. He was changed in his announcement of their engagement and coming marriage had been made public through the newspapers and the preparations went on just the same. He was just as attentive to her as before and there was no indication that his affections had weakened.

Miss Gladden had her wedding gown all prepared and the house at Youngstown had been put in order for the wedding which was to have been an event of more than ordinary prominence. Rev. Gladden, her father, is pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church at Youngstown, one of the largest congregations in the city. He was formerly in charge of the Connellsville Methodist Protestant Church and during his pastorate resided in New Haven. It was during this residence that Mr. Smutz met Miss Gladden.

Miss Gladden in her suit says nearly all of the out of town guests had arrived in Youngstown for the wedding when a telegram came from Mr. Smutz, not 15 hours before they were to be married saying that he would not be in Youngstown for the wedding and that a letter followed at the time Mr. Smutz had renounced through the local newspapers that he would not marry Miss Gladden. What the contents of the letter are could not be learned late this afternoon but it is said Mr. Smutz informed Miss Gladden that after thinking the matter over seriously he had arrived at the conclusion that she Miss Gladden could not take the place of his late wife and he thought it best to drop the marriage arrangements.

The announcement made by Mr. Smutz a few days ago that he intended to go to Mt. Clemens, Mich., for his health and the announcement of his wedding to Miss Gladden was announced in a small sized still in social circles. It was known at that time by friends of both families that preparations had been made to attend the wedding last Wednesday at Youngstown.

among many before the wedding announcement was made. Whether Mr. Smutz agreed to the settlement is not known. It is said that the family desired that he place $25,000 in the name of his bride free from all encumbrances or alliances that might develop as a result of his first marriage.

Although it was a settled fact that the wedding was to take place last Wednesday, no announcement of any kind has been made from the Gladden family and the suit stands as a mute evidence of a broken heart and the climax to a telephone girl's romance started in Connellsville with Cupid sighting the dart at a widower. The suit, if it comes before the court, promises some very sensational and interesting reading.

DEPUTY DECKER

Finds His Persuasive Powers of No Avail on Redstone Township Woman.

UNIONTOWN, Sept. 19.—Deputy Sheriff S. B. Decker had an unpleasant experience early this week when he ejected Mrs. Hannah Davis from the property of her late husband Israel Davis which was recently sold by the Sheriff. Hannah refused to leave the place, and Decker, famed for his persuasive powers, was defeated in his effort. The home is in Redstone township.

Decker rode down to the place and saw Mrs. Davis at the door. She saw him too and dodged inside. Decker stopped to the porch and gently rapped, again or twice—but, against his response. He knocked again with the same result. He then forced the door open and called for Hannah. No response.

A search was instituted and finally the missing woman was found hidden beneath a mountain of bottles piled up with the woman but she refused to heed his advice. As a last resort he placed her up gently deposited her in his buggy and took her to a neighbor's house.

SHOP MEETINGS

Of the Y. M. C. A. Are Meeting With Much Success in Connellsville This Week.

The recently organized shop meetings of the Y. M. C. A. are meeting with much success at the various points where they have been held so far and indications are that much good work will be accomplished by these means. Yesterday at noon the first meeting was held at the B. & O. shops. These meetings are purely for educational purposes. Supervising Principal V. S. Dornbush of the Connellsville schools addressed the B. & O. men.

He gave a masterly talk on the necessity of an all round education for every phase of life and showed how much more important it is that a man should have an education now than it was in the days of imperfect machinery.

Today at noon Principal Fred G. Masters of the Connellsville High School addressed the employees of Boys' Porter & Company. He pointed out the necessity of an education and demonstrated the many ways it is possible for a man to accomplish this when unable to attend regular schools. Prof. Masters devoted some time to a discussion of the educational features of the Y. M. C. A. here.

Tomorrow Dr. G. W. Gallinger will speak at the shops of the Connellsville Manufacturing & Mining Supply Company's shops in New Haven. The meetings are being largely attended. Over 100 were on hand yesterday while nearly that number listened to the talk today.

POLICE COURT HEARINGS.

Inexperienced Lumberman, Fired and Then Arrested in Freight Train, Are Discharged—Two Drunks in Durance Vile for 48 Hours.

Although it is nowhere near April 1, John Edwards, a colored male, was cited in proper style this morning when Chief Rottler and Officer Anderson placed him in the lock up for being drunk. John turned out this morning to look up and made the warden sing with shouts caused by joy waves.

On Pittsburgh street an old officer Anderson who advised him to get out of the streets. John started on his way but the temptation to yell him out at the officer was too much for him. He began a choice flow of profanity and then ran. Anderson followed and at Birminghams Corner, Chief Rottler joined in by chasing him up. John was overhauled and lodged in the borough bastille. John has an aversion to this lockup for while he did add jobs for Burgess Soloson that official never misses a chance to tease the negro. He upon him took any other offender's case.

Eleven Weathered of Wholesaler a bootblack working in town was given a hearing this morning for being drunk. He took the 48 hour test case. Sam Plummer of town was given the same sentence for a similar offense.

Special Officer W. T. Bayless last night took J. P. Richards, Joe Warren, Joe Donahue and Mike Jopsonski all from Pittsburgh off a freight train. The men were supposed to Mailton where they were expected to cut ties for the Enterprise Lumber company. Not being experienced woodmen they spoiled several timbers in cutting them and were discharged after working a day. Burgess Soloson let them off.

THEY HAVE MANY HOLIDAYS.

Reported From Pittsburgh That Employment Agents Are at Work in the East and Elsewhere After Men Who Will Gradually Replace the Foreigners.

Word comes from Pittsburgh that the big coal and coke companies of the Connellsville region and Southwestern Pennsylvania have tried of foreign labor in their coal mines and on the coke yards and will shortly make an effort to gradually replace them. They will not do this by displacing men but will fill vacant positions in the mines and on the yards. It is said with English speaking labor as far as possible. The reason for this is the unreliability of foreign labor. Within the past two or three years the coke companies of the Connellsville region have been in continual search of labor during the summer and winter so good on the coke yards and in the coal mines that foreign workmen took advantage of every holiday in a few days which they were accustomed to observe in their native country. They would lay off in such numbers that big plants were often crippled to more than half their capacity.

When wages were raised last spring making it possible for miners to make as high as $10 a day it was thought there would be no further scarcity of labor but such has not been the case. All summer a majority of the works through the Connellsville district have complained of a shortage of men. DeWitt's dispatch of foreign labor recently has been receiving a warm reception in large numbers. Most of them are only going to a visit having accumulated enough money to make the trip and spend a couple of months in their old homes and then be in a position to return with a handsome balance in the bank to resume their work.

This sudden leaving on vacations has been disastrous to the coke yards in many instances. It will now be the duty to replace foreign workmen who leave their positions with English speaking men in the hope that they will work steadily.

THEY'RE OUT ON BAIL.

Coterie of Alleged Capital Grafters Appear at Harrisburg and Give Bond.

AMOUNT $60,000 IN EACH CASE

Attorney General Todd Begins Work of Bringing Loozers to Justice by Having Alleged Ringleaders Arrested—More Arrests to Follow.

Harrisburg, Sept. 18.—The long-expected arrest of those held to be responsible for the frauds committed in the furnishing and decorating of Pennsylvania's $13,000,000 capitol have been made, the attorney general having secured warrants for 14 of the 18 persons and firms named by the Capitol investigation commission as being involved in the scandal. Those for whom warrants were issued are:

John H. Sanderson, the subcontractor whose profits amounted to a vast fortune estimated at more than $1,000,000, the man who made and made contracts with his pleasure; who substituted putty for masonry and brought French baccarat glass from Monaco, Beaver county, Pa. Joseph M. Huston, architect, who took everything out of the hands of everybody, including the state board, whose duty it was to attend to the very things, the neglect of which made graft possible.

Charles F. Wetter of Philadelphia, a partner of Payne.

James M. Shumaker, former superintendent of public grounds and buildings, who certified to the bills of contractors and invoices of furnishings never received.

William P. Snyder, former auditor general, who passed bills of Sanderson, Huston and others without a question.

William L. Mathews, former state treasurer, who never raised a question about the enormous bills and who paid a midnight visit to the state treasury recently.

Charles F. Kinman, Wallace Boleau, John G. Nelderer and George K. Stern, connected with Sanderson in the operation of the Pennsylvania Bronze company, which loaded the capitol with fake bronze and Beaver county baccarat glass.

Frank Irvine, clerk in Auditor General Snyder's office.

Stanford B. Lewis, Huston's assistant in capitol masterpiece.

Defendants Give Bail.

The warrants were sworn out before Harrisburg aldermen, and nearly all the defendants, who had been notified by the attorney general of the action he had taken, appeared during the day, waived a hearing and entered bail for their appearance in the Dauphin county court. Several were unable to appear because of illness and will make their appearance later.

The principal defendants were held in $60,000 bail, which was furnished in every instance by surety companies. All the defendants are charged with conspiracy to cheat and defraud the state by making false invoices, which were approved by Huston and Sanderson.

Obtaining money by false pretense was also entered against Sanderson. Congressman Cassel, Payne and Wetter, being alleged to have furnished fictitious bills for a greater amount than they were entitled to receive under their contracts.

State Treasurer Berry Cause of It All.

The prosecution are the outcome of the political upheaval in Philadelphia in 1906, when Mayor Weaver quarreled with the Republican organization. The independent movement against the Republicans in Philadelphia that year spread throughout the state and led to the election as state treasurer of William H. Berry, a Democrat, on the fusion ticket.

Berry took office early in 1906, being the first Democrat to occupy that position in 25 years. In the fall campaign of last year, Berry startled the state by charging that according to the state treasury books the building and furnishing of the state capitol had cost $13,000,000, and not $5,000,000 as had been generally believed, and that $8,000,000 of the money went to furnish the building. He charged that $5,000,000 of the $9,000,000 was "pure graft."

Gov. Pennypacker, other state officials and the contractors denied the charges, but the agitation for investigation which immediately began continued until the last legislature appointed a commission to investigate the whole affair. Much sensational testimony was brought out during the hearings which covered a period of about six months. The commission made a report to Gov. Stuart, who turned it over to Attorney General Todd.

The latter thought the evidence of fraud was so strong that he decided to bring criminal and civil suits against those held to be responsible for the frauds.

SCOTTSDALE, Sept. 18.—There was a spurt of activity in local realty during the last couple of days, when A. P. Byrne of the Byrne Real Estate company made several deals in local property. Among them was the sale of the property and fixtures of the bakery and store at the late R. L. Dirstein on South Broadway to Mrs. J. C. Cullley of town. Mr. Cullley bought the property, which is a three-story brick building, with a fully equipped and modern bakery, as an investment, and the consideration has not been made public. Other transactions were the dwelling of Edward Campbell on Oakfield avenue to Geo. F. Cline for $1,500, and also a six-room house from Edward Campbell to Jacob Buehler for $1,900. Mr. Campbell is building himself a handsome new residence on Mayor avenue. William B. Miller has sold his property on Church street, just below the St. John's R. C. parsonage to Mrs. Richard Watson of Everett. He sold his dwelling house to Albert Wilczynski for $1,100. All these sales were made by the Byrne Real Estate company.

Rev. D. P. Stoelmitz of the United Evangelical church says that the conference of the church has made several important changes in the work in this section. The anti-splitting ordinance recently passed by Council has gained the particular approval of the women of town, who are so anxious to get out of town without fear of depriving their skirts through tobacco juice. The ordinance has proven a really popular law, and all along the streets people are seen to go to the curb to spit out into a receptacle provided for the purpose. The pavements were discovered with spit they are now clean. Signs in foreign languages warning people about spitting on the sidewalks have been posted and, while there have been a few instances of people spitting on the sidewalks, they have been done most unthinkingly. The ordinance has created a wonderful change in the cleanliness of the sidewalks, and this without growing from any one "Squid" people when the matter was brought to their notice, were quick in helping to keep the sidewalks clean.

Save Your Linens!

Inferior starch is ruinous to fine linens. It fades and all other fabrics. It shortens the life, destroys the beautiful finish appearance and causes them to go to pieces. The one and only way to be sure of quality in starch is to get the genuine

YOU'LL DO BETTER AT Featherman & Sumberg's

A Big Advantage In Buying Early

Those of you who make it a point to do your buying early—right at the opening of seasons when the stocks are the biggest and the selections are the best—know that there is an advantage in making early purchases. You will find this to be true right here—and particularly now—this fall. Our store is packed from cellar to roof with handsome new furniture, carpets, stoves, etc., bought for the present season. Now when the stocks are unbroken and the selections complete, will be your time to look and buy.

We never showed prettier designs in furniture than we are exhibiting this fall. Many lines of parlor suits, bedroom suits, diningroom furniture, side boards, buffets, couches and rockers of unique construction which are entire new to the whole country. We made it a point in buying our Fall Goods to get something new and out of the ordinary, and when you have looked over our stocks you will agree that we have furniture such as was never shown hereabouts before.

Don't Use a Scarecrow

To Drive Away the Mail Order Wolf

You can drive him out quickly if you use the mail order houses' own weapon—advertising. Mail order concerns are spending thousands of dollars every week in order to get trade from the home merchants. Do you think for a minute they would keep it up if they didn't get the business? Don't take it for granted that every mail order house within a radius of 25 miles knows what you have to sell, and what your prices are. Nine times out of ten your prices are lower, but the customer is influenced by the up-to-date advertising of the mail order house. Every article you advertise should be described and priced. You must tell your story in an interesting way, and when you want to reach the buyers of this community use the columns of this paper.

THURSDAY EVE, SEPT. 19, 1907

THE FUTURE OF CONNELLSVILLE

Recent sales of real estate amply demonstrate the fact that Connelville is moving forward, not backward. The record of the past few years shows that real estate investments have been universally and progressively profitable. Prices that seemed extravagant ten years ago have doubled and tripled and even quadrupled within that comparatively short period in the town.

Coke ovens may come and coke ovens may go, mines may be developed and mines may be exhausted but the fact will remain that Connelville is the business center of the Connelville coal region. The area of development may extend farther at either end, but the center will remain unchanged and unchangeable. Greensburg on the north and Uniontown in the south will grow bigger and be good business towns, but the trade of the coal region will naturally gravitate to Connelville, which is and will continue to be the center of railway and trolley service. All other sections of the great coal region are necessarily suburbs.

The press of Uniontown and Greensburg will not admit this fact of course but it is demonstrated in the wonderful and continuous and accelerating advances of Connelville real estate values, improvements and population. There are two things which would help that growth and prosperity most materially, and these are the enlargement of our boundaries to include New Haven and all the suburbs of both boroughs, and the establishment of additional and stable industries.

This should be the work of an active and active Board of Trade or a long business line but if this is impossible that highly successful and always busy organization the Merit Association might take the matter up with really to themselves and the whole community.

PLAYGROUNDS FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The curriculum of the Connelville school of the future should be published yesterday in the columns of The Courier. It will furnish a guide for more ambitious families. It says that the American common school is "more practical." We say that the American common school is "more practical." We say that the American common school is "more practical." We say that the American common school is "more practical."

It is a subject which the School Directors of Connelville and elsewhere might consider with propriety and interest. It is a subject which the School Directors of Connelville and elsewhere might consider with propriety and interest. FOREIGN LABOR AND ITS HOLIDAYS.

Foreign countries have holidays as well as the United States and it is natural that the foreign workmen employed in the Connelville coal region should have in his calendar a multiplicity of festivals, especially when our own is added to the list. This is further swollen by a multitude of holidays and the custom of making holidays out of weddings, funerals and christenings.

When wages were low and work was scarce the foreign workman was willing to forego many of these holidays, but since he has been borne along on the breast of the swelling tide of prosperity he has come to feel that he can afford to work less and enjoy himself more. In this position he is fortified in the knowledge that work is no longer scarce, but that women are. The boss no longer commands his services but requests them. The font of discharge is no longer before him. He is dismissed at one plant he has no trouble getting employment at another.

It is not at all surprising under the circumstances that the coke operators are turning their attention to the employment of English speaking miners. The proposed change, if made, will probably prove quite acceptable to the citizens of the coke region. While the Slav has upon the whole been very satisfactory as a resident being the most put honest and industrious and lavishing he is more or less ignorant of our laws and customs and as a class is not so intelligent as the English speaking white men.

The coke operators will probably experience some difficulty in getting labor in sufficient numbers to replace the Slav, and we will not expect to see the latter wholly depart from us in any event. A greater administrative oversight, might be a fatal blow to operations, employes and the community.

The experiment is worth a trial.

THE WEATHER AND ITS COMPENSATIONS.

It has been amply demonstrated by scientific observations that the cutting out of timber lands diminishes the rainfall, but all signs fall in such unusual weather periods as the summer of 1907. Our mountain hills and river valleys have in recent years been denuded of their timber growth as rapidly as men and shills could do the work yet this particular section of the country has been struck by all the most daily rains until the earth and the air are almost waterlogged while other sections notably Canada with its vast stretches of virgin timber has been suffering for rain.

We do not pretend to account for this condition, nor have the meteorologists given us any satisfactory explanation. Wind and weather conditions have been abnormal and we can only speculate on their probable cause. It is due to the wobbling of its poles or the approach of a strenuous Presidential campaign with its storm of windy oratory and its outpourings of denunciation or to other causes hidden to human eye and beyond the ken of human intellect. We can only accept the situation as we find it and extract what comes out of it and in the meantime we find in excellent water supply and frequently and thoroughly washed streets.

There is some compensation in these striking matters are quite within their rights. We think in arguing the question with the men who are the cause of it, to take their places. The drought of such matters is that they become a habit and on or off in the future arguments not sanctioned by tight reason or the law.

The B & O trackmen are suspected of a design to put a spike in the wage schedule. Scottsdale real estate market indicates that it is a good time to invest in real estate. It is a good time to invest in real estate. It is a good time to invest in real estate.

Abetted by the weather, the straw hat still holds the ultimatum of fashion. Connelville's Town Council has in decided a will to do the best thing about the building and public use of the fire house and no doubt New Haven's authorities will be willing to do their proper share.

Connellville contractors do not seem to want small utility jobs. They are not sure they will have to be built by day labor.

Burgess Solason has decided that no man is entitled to a supply of the same day and a wife is justified in refusing such a demand. There is no law in this matter. It is a matter of common sense. It is a matter of common sense.

The mailed list of Fayette county justice is added to the black list. The list is added to the black list. The list is added to the black list.

Distances Corner has produced a total case of insanity. On this occasion, time is a matter of the day. It is a matter of the day. It is a matter of the day.

People who let the police could have no right to expect a newspaper to discriminate in their favor. The State Constabulary is warning on the tramps and petty thieves who are working Connelville's suburbs.

THE FOOT LIGHTS.

A Duty of Yours

Did you ever stop to think that you owe it to yourself to see the many pretty fables and garments that we have here to show you now? Also that you owe it to your pocketbook to find out the prices on these goods. No differences how much or how little you expect to spend this fall the prices of these goods ought to interest you. We want to talk to you about their quality and their prettiness and then we leave it to your own judgment about the prices being right. Because we can save you money on this kind of goods, you want to feel that we deserve your business, and we want just as much of it as we deserve.

THE UNION MEN GIVE TESTIMONY.

Equity Proceedings Against
Yesterday Afternoon.

CLAIM VIOLENCE WASN'T USED.

In Efforts to Prevent New Men From Taking the Places of Strikers in the Connellsville and New Haven Machine Shops.

The hearing in the Connellsville equity proceedings before Judge Reppert in the large court room yesterday afternoon and a number of the members of the union were called to explain their actions towards the Connellsville Manufacturing & Mine Supply Company and which actions were taken as the basis of the proceedings. Not one of the witnesses heard on the part of the defense was willing to testify that he attempted at any time to interfere with the operation of the manufacturing plant, which is located in Dunbar township, a short distance from the New Haven borough line.

George Swallow, who was one of the main defendants, admitted quite reluctantly that he was working in the interests of the union and that it was one of his purposes, so far as possible, to prevent the operation of the plant under present conditions. He said he was acting in and on behalf of the union. There was quite an argument during the examination of this witness on what constituted interference. Attorney Jones for the defense held that stopping a man who came into the town to work at the mill and simply arguing the matter with him and then allowing him to do as he pleased after a full knowledge of the facts had been given him, was not interference, even though it might work a hardship on the manufacturing company. Attorney Higbee for the plaintiff side took the opposite view.

Theodore Rose, another defendant, was called to testify and denied he had done picket duty as claimed by the witnesses at the time the side of the plaintiff was heard two weeks ago. Moreover, he did not know of any one doing duty of this kind and was certain that there was no organized effort to prevent men from working at the plant of the plaintiff concern. He admitted going to the boarding house of Samuel Johnson and asking for a boarder, but could see no wrong in this. Rose also branded as untrue the story of some of the witnesses to the effect that he had been guilty of calling some of the non-union men scabs and other names just because they worked at the plant. So far as he was concerned he could see no reason why they should charge him with trying in any way to prevent the running of the works.

Robert Yarnell, one of the older defendants, said he had left the place and now had a job in the pipe mills at Scottdale. He was willing to admit that he had been on the streets of New Haven and Connellsville quite frequently after the union declared a strike but denied any interference with the workmen. He was accused by some of the plaintiff witnesses with taking violent hold of one of the new workmen and demanding that he return to work. As to this Yarnell explained that he simply approached the new workman as a brother and told him of the strike and allowed him to then take his choice. Yarnell was accused of doing picket duty each day but said this was not true, although he did not deny being on the streets each day quite often.

H. G. Kelly had been accused of telling a boy who worked at the plant that he had better quit or he might get hurt. He admitted running after him on the street and calling opprobrious names, but as to the getting hurt part, said he meant that a crane or something might strike him.

DIED IN BED.

Albert Dunlap, a Former Resident of Connellsville.
Albert P. Dunlap, aged 30 years, was found dead in bed one morning last week at his home in New York. He was a former resident of Connellsville.

Mr. Dunlap went to New York several months ago from Pittsburgh and secured employment in the machine shops at the plant of the New York Shipbuilding Company. He retired shortly after eating his supper, telling his mother and sister that he felt tired and urging them to call him in time to go to work in the morning, for he was afraid he would oversleep himself.

Shortly after 5 o'clock his widowed mother rapped several times on his door. Receiving no reply she turned the knob and saw him lying apparently peacefully asleep. She called to him several times, and as there was no answer, she went to his bedside only to find him dead.

Her sorrows brought her daughter and several of the neighbors to the scene and the agonized mother was persuaded to leave the room.

Decensed was a son of the late Thomas Dunlap, formerly of this place, and a grandson of Mrs. William Dunlap of York avenue. He was raised in Connellsville, leaving here a few years ago to live in Pittsburgh.

FINE OPENING

Of the Colonial Theatre With When
Knighthood Was in Flower
Last Evening.

The formal opening of the Colonial Theatre yesterday afternoon and last evening was a decided success. The attraction was "When Knighthood Was in Flower," and while the show was first made famous several years ago by Julia Marlowe, which makes it impossible to be called a new attraction, it is one of those plays which are always interesting and attractive. "When Knighthood Was in Flower" was the first dramatization of the so-called historical novel, and for this reason it has a peculiar interest with its itself.

As Mary Tudor, Miss Anna Day was all that could be desired, while the rest of the company gave excellent support. Miss Day's work brought forth the rounds of applause which it so well deserved.

The opening of the theatre for the present season was a sort of a "homecoming" for many of those steady regulars who are to be seen at all the large performances. Before the curtain rose the time was passed with words of recognition between friends, in that "glad to see you back" expression.

Although the play has been seen here before, if Manager Slinger brings attractions here of such excellent merit, there is no question but that the house will enjoy excellent patronage.

FOOTBALL TEAM

Will Be Organized to Represent Star
Junction and Call is Issued to Candidates.

STAR JUNCTION, Sept. 10.—The young men of this place have decided to organize a football team for the coming season and have issued a call for candidates to meet at the athletic grounds Friday evening, September 20, for practice. Prospects are bright for a fast team, as there is plenty of good material to choose from. Orian Richy will have charge of the team and will be the coach. Among those who will be out for the team are: Albert Strawn, William Hughes and Albert Baughman. Star Junction boys that played on the Perryopolis team last season.

The team will average 141 pounds and is willing to meet all in their class.

PURCHASED PROPERTY.

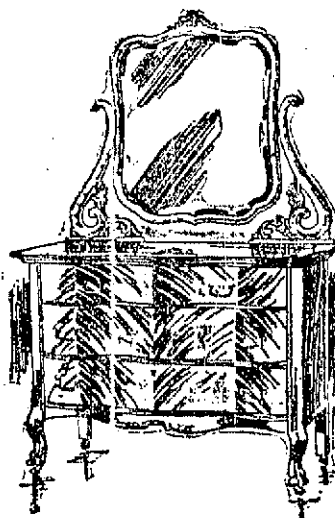

Miss Ada G. Hutchinson Buys Dull
Farm at Mill Run.

Miss Ada G. Hutchinson yesterday closed a deal, through the agency of S. M. Hutchinson, for the purchase of the William H. Dull property near Mill Run. Mr. Dull has purchased interests at Connellsville and will move there in a short time.

The Mill Run place consists of 20 acres, with a comfortable eight room dwelling built thereon and many improvements. It was formerly owned by Thomas J. Gallagher of Pittsburgh, who has made his summer home there, and since that time other Pittsburgh parties have owned it. The consideration was $2,200.

Billy the Kid.
A strong, well written, melodramatic play, full of exciting incidents and telling a well told story, with plenty of good comedy scenes to relieve the tension is what LeRoy Sumner's play, "Billy the Kid," is reported to be. It deals with scenes and incidents which tend to make the red blood in man's veins run a little faster, but the story is told in a way that makes it quite logical. Young Sumner will be remembered as playing for a number of years the stellar roles in plays where the hero was a boy, and he was generally regarded as being at the head of his profession, and he made a host of friends who will welcome him as a full fledged star. "Billy the Kid" will be at the Colonial Theatre opening, September 15.

Growing Sentiment for More
Elastic Constitution Alarms

URGES HEARERS TO COMBAT IT

Intimates That People Need Check
Upon Them in Times of Popular Excitement—Constitution Just as Efficient Now as Ever, He Says.

Hillsboro, O., Sept. 10.—Senator J. B. Foraker, a native of this county, was chief orator on soldiers' day at the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the founding of Hillsboro. By combining "homecoming week" with the centennial thousands of former residents have been brought here from all sections. Being soldiers' day many of the regimental reunions were held, after which a mass meeting was addressed by Gen. H. C. Corbin, U. S. A., retired; Adj. Gen. Joseph Neill of the National G. A. R., United States Senator Foraker and others. Senator Foraker in his speech said:

"Never before the Civil war nor since, until within the last two or three years, has the slightest countenance been given by the American people, particularly by anyone in authority, to any suggestion from any source that our constitution should ever be amended except only in accordance with its own provisions, much less that the judicial department should preside in the great power in an effort to change the constitution by judicial construction or that the people or the officials of the government, high or low, should disregard its limitations or in any manner overstep the powers it confers in the slightest degree under any pretext whatever. For more than a century we have found a way, and with simplicity, of meeting every emergency that has arisen consistently with the constitution."

"Notwithstanding this long and successful experience there is abroad in the land a widespread and dangerous sense, not only with the restraints of the constitution, but of positive purpose to disregard, violate, and overthrow its provisions if they cannot be otherwise evaded."

"To say that the constitution or any part of it has become obsolete is simply to deal in a rhetoric which violates sentiment as well as contradicts facts. No greater calamity could befall this country than for it to change its constitution at the behest of the federal government to deal with all or any considerable part of the subjects over which the states reserved control. The many powers of the federal government conferred directly and by implication to deal with national and international affairs call for more legislation than is possible for the congress to carefully consider, thoroughly debate, and properly enact. If we were to have these powers enlarged so as to take away from the states the subjects of legislation in any considerable number which now belong to these states or reserved to the people it would mean that the government at Washington would be simply swamped, unless while we were amending the constitution to make such a change we should also provide for a representative and more adequate method of enacting laws and exercising federal powers, and that, it may be assumed, the American people will not be willing to do so long as they appreciate American liberty."

"It was treason in 1861-65 to undertake with arms to overthrow the constitution. It is not within the constitutional definition of treason to undertake to overthrow that instrument by the advocacy of the idea that it shall be changed by judicial interpretation or by compelling disregard of its provisions through the force of public sentiment."

"The great purpose of the constitutional barriers was to resist storms of passion and protect against unreasoning sentiment in times of undue excitement. From the knowledge of this safeguard arises the assurance of wisdom in the conduct of our affairs and consequent stability for our institutions. This sense of security is invaluable. No higher duty rests on the American people at this time than that of settling their faces resolutely against all suggestions and plans that would destroy or impair it."

CHAPTER XVII

FOR the next day or two Paul was kept close to work in the office reading a number of tales which were awaiting judgment. After hours he would find a note pinned to his door, and he would find it was a note from the Scotland Yard office, asking if he had received his own notification regarding Mrs. Krill, and if so, what he proposed to do concerning it. Hurd did not reply to this note and Paul was growing puzzled over the silence of the detective. At length the answer came not in writing, but in the person of Hurd himself, who called on Deceit.

The young man had just finished his frugal meal and was sitting down to an evening's work when there came a knock on the door. Hurd dressed in his usual brown suit, presented himself looking cool and composed. But he was more excited than one would imagine, as Paul saw from the expression of his eyes. The detective accepted a cup of coffee and lighted his pipe. Then he sat down in the armchair on the opposite side of the fireplace and prepared to talk. Paul looked on calmly with a level hand, little as he could afford this extravagance as the night was cold and he guessed that Hurd had much to say. So on the whole they had a very comfortable and interesting conversation.

"I suppose you are pleased to see me," asked Hurd, puffing meditatively at his pipe.

Paul nodded. "Very glad," he answered, "that is if you have done anything about Mrs. Krill."

"Well," drawled the detective, smiling, "I have been investigating that murder case."

"Lady Rachel Sanda's?" said Deceit eagerly. "Is it really murder?"

"I think so, though some folks think it suicide. Curious you should have stumbled across that young lord," went on Hurd musingly, "and more curious still that he should have been in the room with Mrs. Krill without recollecting the name. There was a great fuss made about it at the time."

"Oh, I can understand Lord George," said Deceit promptly. "The moment it is one took place before he was born, and there seems to have been some scandal in the matter, the family rushed it up. This young fellow probably gathered scraps of information from old servants, but from what he said to me in the cab I think he knows very little."

"Quite enough to put me on the track of Lord George's reason for leaving Christchurch."

"Is that the reason?"

"Yes. Twenty-one years ago he left Christchurch at the very time Lady Rachel was murdered in his public house. Then he disappeared for a time and turned up a year later in Gwynne street with a young wife whom he had married in the mean time."

"Sylvia's mother?"

"Exactly. And Miss Norman was born a year later. She is nearly twenty one now."

"She will be twenty one in three months."

Hurd nodded gravely. "The time corresponds," said he. "As the crime was committed twenty-three years back and Lord George is now twenty one, I can understand how he knows a little about it. But didn't he connect Mrs. Krill with the man who died in Gwynne street?"

"She explained that. The name of Lord George's father was Lord George. But I don't like telling lies, but in this case I hope the departure from truth will be pardoned."

"To a detective?"

"To a detective," said the detective, "I don't think he has much brains," confessed Paul shrugging his shoulders, but he asked me if I thought Mrs. Krill was the same as the lady of the Red Pig and I decided that she was. I don't like telling lies, but in this case I hope the departure from truth will be pardoned."

"To a detective?"

"To a detective," said the detective, "I don't think he has much brains," confessed Paul shrugging his shoulders, but he asked me if I thought Mrs. Krill was the same as the lady of the Red Pig and I decided that she was. I don't like telling lies, but in this case I hope the departure from truth will be pardoned."

man came to Gwynne street over twenty years ago—that came out in the evidence connected with his death. There were putting two and two together I searched in the newspaper of that period and found what I wanted."

"A report of the case?"

"Precisely. And after that I hunted up the records at Scotland Yard for further details that were not made public. So I got the whole story together, and I am pretty certain that Aaron Norman, or as he then was known, Lord George, murdered Lady Rachel for the sake of that precious brooch."

"Ah," said Paul drawing a breath when he saw it again. No wonder, considering it was connected in his mind with the death of Lady Rachel."

"Quite so. And no wonder the man kept looking over his shoulder in the expectation of being tapped on the shoulder by a policeman. I don't wonder also that he looked up the house and kept his eye on the ground and went to church secretly to pray. What a life he must have led! Upon my soul, had as the man was I'm sorry for him."

"So am I," said Paul. "And after all he is Sylvia's father."

"Poor girl, to have a murderer for a father!"

Deceit turned pale. "I love Sylvia for herself," he said with an effort, "and if her father had committed twenty murders I would not let her go. But she must never know."

"What," said Hurd stretching his hand across and giving Paul a friendly grip, "and I knew you'd stick to her. It wouldn't be fair to blame the girl for what her father did before she was born."

"We must keep everything from her, Hurd. I'll marry her and take her abroad sooner than she should learn of this previous murder. But how did it happen?"

"I'll tell you in a few minutes," Hurd rose and began to pace the narrow limits of the attic. By the way do you know that Norman was a secret drinker of brandy?"

Paul nodded, and told the detective what he had learned from Mrs. Krill. Hurd said he was quite sure. "Drink does change the ordinary nature into the opposite. Kill color was a timid rabbit. Kill drunk was a murderer and a thief. Good Lord and how he drank!"

"How do you know?"

"Well," confessed Hurd nursing his chin, "Paul and I went to search the Gwynne street house to find if possible the story alluded to in the scrap of paper Deborah Junk found. We could drop across anything of the sort, but in Norman's bedroom, which nobody ever entered, we found brandy bottles by the score—under the bed ranged along the walls filling up corners, stowed away in boxes. I had the curiosity to count them. There we found ran up to 500, and Lord knows how many more he must have got rid of when he found the bottles crowding him inconveniently."

"I expect he got drunk every night," said Paul thinking. "When he looked up Sylvia and Deborah in the upper room—I can understand now why he did so—he could go to the cellar and take possession of the shop he left behind him. But I don't think he ever did it!" went on Deceit, mindful of what Mrs. Krill had said he could stand a lot, and I expect the brandy only converted him into a demon."

"And a clever business man," said Hurd. "You know Aaron Norman was not clever over the books. But sold those but not all accounts he was a shrewd fellow when dealing after 7 o'clock in the pawnbroking way. I understand now. Sober, he was a timid fool, drunk he was a bold clever villain."

"My poor Sylvia! What a father," sighed Paul. "But this crime—"

"I'll tell you about it. Let me Krill and his wife kept the Red Pig at Christchurch, a little public house it is on the outskirts of the town frequented by farm laborers and such like. The business was pretty good. But the couple didn't look to make their fortune. Mrs. Krill was a farmer's daughter."

"A Buckinghamshire farmer," said Paul.

"How do you know? Oh (on receiving information) Mrs. Krill told you so? Well, considering the murder of Lady Rachel she would have done better to hold her tongue and have commenced life with her dead husband's money under a new name. She's a clever woman too," mused Hurd. "I can understand her being so unscrupulous."

"Never mind," said Paul impatiently.

Hurd returned to his seat and refilled his pipe. "Well then," he continued, "Krill got drunk and gave his wife great trouble. Sometimes he threatened her and blacked her eyes and he treated her daughter badly too."

"How old was the daughter?"

"I can't say. I don't know."

"I'll tell you later. Go on please."

"Well then Mrs. Krill always repressed herself on her husband when he was sober and timid, so the couple were evenly matched. Krill was never when drunk, and his wife mistreated when he was sober—a kind of seesaw sort of life they must have led."

"Where does Lady Rachel come in?"

"What an important chap you are!"

remonstrated Hurd in a friendly tone. "You coming to that now, Lady Rachel quarreled with her father over some young artist she wanted to marry. He would not allow the lover to come to the ball, so Lady Rachel said she would kill herself rather than give him up."

"And she did," said Paul thinking of the suicide theory.

"There you go again. How am I to tell you all when you interrupt?"

"I beg your pardon. I won't do so again."

Hurd nodded smiling and continued. "One night—it was dark and stormy—Lady Rachel had a row with her father. Then she ran out of the hall saying her father would never see her alive again. She may have intended to commit suicide certainly or she may have intended to join her lover in London. But whatever she intended to do the rain cooled her. She staggered into Christchurch and fell down in front of the door of the Red Pig. Mrs. Krill brought her in, dressed and laid her on a bed."

"Did she know who the lady was?"

Hurd shook his head. "She said in her evidence that she did not but living in the neighborhood she certainly must have seen Lady Rachel some times. Krill was drunk as usual. He had been boozing all the day with a skipper of some craft at Southampton. He was good for nothing as Mrs. Krill did every thing. She declared that she went to bed at 11, leaving Lady Rachel sleeping."

"Did Lady Rachel recover her senses?"

"According to Mrs. Krill—but she refused to say who she was and merely stated that who she was and on the next night at 11 o'clock she was found dead in the morning. Mrs. Krill swore that Lady Rachel had no intention of committing suicide. Well, about midnight Mrs. Krill went to one room with her daughter was awakened by loud shouts. She sprang to her feet and hurried out. Her daughter came as she was had been awakened and was terrified. Mrs. Krill found that her husband was in a room with drink and smashing the furniture in the room below."

"What was the skipper's name?"

"Joseph-Jarvis. Joseph. Well he was also rather drunk, was reticent to be and stumbled by chance into Lady Rachel's room. He found her quite dead and shouted for assistance. The poor lady had a skull fracture which she was tightly bound or throat and fastened to the bedpost. When Joseph saw this he ran out of the house in dismay. Mrs. Krill decided to give the alarm to her neighbors but Krill struck her down and struck his daughter also making her mouth bleed. An opal brooch that Lady Rachel wore was missing but Mrs. Krill only knew of that the next day. She was insolent from the blow given by Krill and the daughter ran out to get assistance. When the neighbors entered Krill was gone and not standing all the while made for him, he could not be found."

"And Joseph?"

"He turned up and explained that he had been frightened on finding the woman dead. He said he found him on his craft at Southampton and he gave evidence. He said that Krill when drunk and like a demon as Mrs. Krill told you had hit the poor girl over the head with a bottle and then the skipper had a skull fracture, and then Joseph said it was the body. It was supposed by the police that Krill had killed Lady Rachel for the sake of the brooch which could not be discovered."

"But the brooch—"

"Hold on. I know what you are about to say. Well come to that shortly. Let me finish this first. It was also alleged that Mrs. Krill's last words to her father and from the position of the body—said by the neck it is to be lost the said dearest and the daughter's sister mentioned the idea of making away with herself. However, Krill's flight and the chance that being drunk he might have strangled the lady for the sake of the brooch while out of the room, could not be found."

Standard Oil Fine a Forerunner of Others.

By THOMAS W. LAWSON, Philadelphian

IF people make their own laws, the people would not make laws to perfect their own robbery. THE PEOPLE HAVE BEEN ROBBED, ARE BEING ROBBED, THEREFORE THEIR LAWS MUST BE TRICKED; show the people the trick, and they will apply it to those who have had their surplus earnings of the past twenty-five years of unprecedented prosperity.

A United States judge has fined one offender out of hundreds $29,340,000, and in every state in the Union there can be seen the FRENZIED SCRAMBLING OF THE PEOPLE to get their filks, barrels and hogheads ready for the outpouring of the at last tilted spout.

I NOW PREDICT THAT THE $29,340,000 FINE OF STANDARD OIL WILL APPEAR INSIGNIFICANT IN COMPARISON WITH THOSE WE WILL READ OF IN A FEW WEEKS OR MONTHS—AND WHY NOT, WHY NOT?

First—We all know there have been STUPENDOUS stealings from the people. We all know who did the stealing. We all know who has the LOOT, and some of us are showing the rest how the stealing was done.

Second—For a quarter of a century the world has asked the question, What will happen when the American people awaken to the fact that a favored few are getting all the surplus of the people? And every time the question has been asked STUDENTS OF AFFAIRS AMERICAN HAVE SHUDDERED, shuddered because they remembered ancient Rome and modern France. They shuddered because they feared the American people in their awakening might forget the laws they had made and—there would be no American republic.

Third—All this $29,340,000 fine comes from where the money is and goes to where it is not—comes from the few to the many—and it is the very basic rock of economics that GOOD MUST COME FROM THE FEW AND GIVING TO THE MANY, provided the taking is done legally.

Fourth—The riches of America are in the billions of corporation tokens of wealth. These are owned directly or indirectly by the PEOPLE, and anything which legally enhances their value benefits the people, anything which tends to weaken the grip of the makers and controllers of these corporation tokens, who in the past used their control to divert the earnings of the corporations from their owners, the people, to their own pockets, this, too, benefits the people.

THAT IS WHY I SAY WHY NOT FINE AND FINE THE CORPORATION LAWBREAKERS UNTIL THE LAST ONE HAS REPAID TO THE LAST CENT POSSIBLE THE PROCEEDS OF THE ROBBERIES OF THE PAST?

one so you can see how equally they were divided. Lady Rachel's body was laid in the family vault and nothing more was heard of the brooch which could not be discovered."

"What did Mrs. Krill do?"

"She stepped on at the inn as she to do you. People were sorry for her and helped her so she did not stay long. But how did he get money to start as a bookkeeper? From where are not the Red Pig all these years. Rightly respected until they saw the hand of the about Krill. Then the money was claimed, but as the circumstance of Lady Rachel's fate was so odd nobody the right of mentioning it all this young lord did so to you and I as you see, have hunted out the details."

"What is your opinion Hurd?" asked Paul deeply interested.

"Oh, I think Krill murdered the woman and then out to London. That accounts for his looking over his shoulder all the time."
